FREELINE SPORTS, INC. INTRODUCES A NEW WAY TO SHRED

Revolutionary Product Takes Board-Sports to the Extreme with a New Way to Ride

Orange County, Calif. (2008) Invented by Ryan Farrelly, Freeline Skates are dual independent skates that go sideways. They combine elements of skateboarding, surfing and snowboarding, offering riders more freedom and flexibility than the traditional skateboard. For athletes looking to push the envelope, these skateboard-like decks deliver the Next Ride™ with a challenging new way to carve turns, invent new tricks and have fun.

With the wheels facing sideways and reinforced swing-style arms that are able to hold up to 3000 lbs of downward force, Freeline Skates are not only unique in design, but they are progressive in size and style which means that they offer board-sport fans a higher level of challenge, performance and fun.

"We believe that the nature of skating is about pushing through to new limits, so with Freeline Skates, we were determined to create something that would take riding to the next level," said Farrelly. "With that said, we're not out to replace other action sports in the market; we simply offer a new challenge to enthusiasts looking for something fresh."

Freeline Skates allow users to partake in a whole new set of tricks including:

- The Stomp
- Dub Stomp
- Flip Stomp
- Dub Flip Stomp
- Throwback
- Switchit
- Pop Drop
- Kink
- Dub Kink
- many many more

For the first time in action sports history, athletes can make use of their snowboarding and surfing skills without having to buy lots of expensive equipment and without the need to relocate to oceans or mountains to get their dose of extreme sports. Freeline Skates are compact enough to fit in any backpack, making them easy to transport and great for any occasion.

Freeline Skates are available at www.freelineskates.com. Check out the web site for cool demos on how to use the product with helpful step-by-step tips from the inventor himself.
